BREADTH AND FOCUS

Coursework drawn from multiple departments across campus provides the breadth needed for an international perspective, as well as the opportunity to explore more fully your area of specialization. An introductory seminar will familiarize you with SIU departments, professors, and international opportunities and perspectives. A required senior project gives you the opportunity to personalize your academic experience with a focus that is wholly your own.

INTERNATIONAL STUDIES is a great program for those interested in an international perspective on such issues as human rights, the environment, energy and resources, technology and more. Potential employers include international governmental and nongovernmental organizations, trade agencies and multinational corporations. International Studies is also an excellent undergraduate specialization for those seeking advanced degrees in law, political science, public administration, journalism and other areas.
