This document contains information submitted by the teaching faculty of the Department of English, SIUC, to inform students about courses being offered.

The English Department Writing Centers (located in Morris Library Room 236 and Trueblood Hall Learning Resource Center) provide resources for all SIU-C students who want to improve their ability as writers. Students may be seen at either Center for single-visit appointments, which can be made two days in advance, or for regular weekly appointments, which continue for as much of the semester as the student wishes. There is no charge for these visits. Staff members at the Centers are graduate and undergraduate students trained in effective one-to-one teaching strategies. For more information, check out our website www.siu.edu/~write or contact: Dr. Jane Cogie, Director, Writing Center, Faner 2283, (618) 453-6846 or 453-1231.

For explicit information on prerequisites, students should consult the Undergraduate Catalog. For further information about course offerings, please contact the Department of English.

ENGL 301 INTRODUCTION TO LITERARY ANALYSIS (3 CR)

PREREQUISITES: Engl 102 or Engl 120 H or equivalent.

301 – 301
INSTRUCTOR: Bogumil

COURSE DESCRIPTION

Required of all English majors, English 301 is intended to be one of the first English courses a student takes. The emphasis is on writing based upon intensive rather than extensive reading, although selections are drawn from several major genres (poetry, fiction, drama, non-fiction). Students are introduced to basic terms and concepts of literary study and to different ways of approaching literary texts.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS

- 6 Analyses (3 pages plus/10 pts ea./total 60 pts)
- 1 test (quotation identification and explication/10 quotations worth 10 pts ea/100 pts.)
- Critical Analysis Paper - 6 to 8 pages in length (10 pts for draft/90 pts for paper/100 pts total)

REQUIRED TEXTS

Handouts:

- T.S. Eliot, The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock and other poems
ENGL 302A
LITERARY HISTORY OF BRITAIN: THE MEDIEVAL AND RENAISSANCE PERIODS (3 CR)

PREREQUISITES: Engl 102 or Engl 120 H or equivalent.

INSTRUCTOR: Boulukos

COURSE DESCRIPTION
The primary goal of this course will be to give students a clear sense of the history of British literature from its origins in the early medieval period through the end of the English Renaissance; this period also sees the development of the English language, from Old English to Middle English to Modern English. We will also develop students’ analytical skills and give an introduction to English as a discipline by foregrounding interpretive strategies. In particular, we will place an emphasis on close reading as a basis on which to build interpretive arguments, and on “cultural studies” as a method for drawing attention to ways that literature functions in culture.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS
In addition to regular attendance, careful preparation, and participation in class, there are 2 major requirements for this class.

Exams: Midterm; final
Papers: 6 prep papers (2-3 pages) on assigned texts. These papers will be due the day the reading is due. See further explanation below.

Students will also be required to complete occasional in-class assignments to be completed in small groups. Unannounced quizzes will be added to the requirements if members of the class are not satisfactorily prepared.

Grade Breakdown:
- 2 exams: 65% (30, 35)
- Prep Papers: 30%
- Participation: 5%

REQUIRED TEXTS
Norton Anthology of English Literature, Vol A (Medieval) and Vol B (The 16th and Early 17th Centuries)

ENGL 481
SPECIAL TOPICS - Young Adult Female Protagonists: A Study of the Representation of Female Characters by Authors from American and Around the World (3 CR)

PREREQUISITES: Engl 101 and 102; or Engl 120; or equivalent

INSTRUCTOR: McClure
COURSE DESCRIPTION
ENGLISH 481-301/Summer 2013 provides the framework for a study of Young Adult Literature as represented by novelists from different cultures writing about the lives of young women who face their worlds in many different ways. Novels will be studied in sets with each set focused on a major type of female protagonist and using a focus novel as the reference point for the discussion of the character type as well as related literary elements. For each set, students will be required to read the focus novel and 2 additional novels selected from the assigned list.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS
Assignments for ENGL 481 provide a variety of opportunities to interact with young adult literature in general and the assigned novels in particular. Assignments include: large and small group discussions; in-class group and writing activities; micro-themes (a brief writing assignment that requires students to demonstrate their understanding of a single, specific bit of information); a course portfolio (a well-organized, neatly bound collection of work that both you and I can use to gauge your performance and effort in this course, and to gauge the progress you have made in your ability to read and discuss literature in general and Young Adult Literature in particular); exams (midterm and final). Graduate students are required to complete additional activities, the specifics of which will be determined in discussion with the instructor.

REQUIRED TEXTS
TBA

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>ENGL 493</th>
<th>SPECIAL TOPICS - WORDSWORTH'S LYRICAL BALLADS AND BLAKE'S SONGS OF INNOCENCE AND OF EXPERIENCE (3 CR)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

PREREQUISITES: Engl 101 and 102; or Engl 120; or equivalent

493 – 301 INSTRUCTOR: Collins

COURSE DESCRIPTION
In this course, we will read and discuss representative selections from two of the most important volumes of poetry in English literature: William Blake’s Songs of Innocence and of Experience (1789, 1795), and Samuel Taylor Coleridge and William Wordsworth’s Lyrical Ballads (1798).

For undergraduate students, this course fulfills the requirement of a course in English literature before 1800. For graduate students, this course fulfills either the eighteenth-century or the nineteenth-century literature requirement.

With Blake’s Songs, we have—perhaps uniquely in our literature—a collection of lyrics from a major poet devoted to exploring the boundaries, as well as the crossings-over, between childhood and adulthood. The combined Innocence-Experience volume of 1795 added the subtitle Shewing the Two Contrary States of the Human Soul, and with that word contrary Blake set a problem that has puzzled readers since. Are innocence and experience opposed to each other, and if so, what would this opposition mean for human happiness and social welfare? Or do innocence and experience stand together, antagonistic to some other state, which, if achieved (or even conceptualized), would show the debilitating effects—personal, social, political—of our simplified binaries? One thing is clear: the simplicity of many of the poems is only apparent, while others are so lexically tangled that they seem to criticize our belief that we can “read” at all. Finally, with the Songs we have the rare opportunity to study relations between verbal and visual art, since Blake etched each poem, embedding it in a hand-colored illustration or series of illustrations. A central part of our two weeks on Blake will be devoted to tracing the ways he makes word and image clarify and complicate each other.

Wordsworth and Coleridge’s Lyrical Ballads is of course a landmark—many would say the landmark—of English Romanticism, with riches so great that we will be studying only Wordsworth’s contributions, which, according to Coleridge, proposed “to give the charm of novelty to things of everyday” (Biographia Literaria, chap. 14). Among these everyday things: a proud recluse, a female vagrant, an old woman seeking firewood and a young man who can’t get warm, a huntsman, a mad mother, an idiot boy, a forsaken Indian woman, and a convict. In his brief “Advertisement” to the volume, Wordsworth asked readers to try to let the poems challenge their notions of what might legitimately count as “poetry.” And certainly the poems have since retained their ability to make us “struggle,” as he wrote, “with feelings of strangeness and awkwardness.” He himself saw these “experiments” as re-editing the poet’s very lexicon, and in the second two weeks of the course we will be placing his verse and its subject-matter against its literary background, asking just where its originality lies.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS
Timely and careful reading of the verse and any assigned supplementary material; regular attendance and active participation in class discussion; in-class writing and/or reading quizzes; several shorter papers (500 words each); a critical paper (5+ pages); and two examinations. Graduate students will also submit an evaluation of a scholarly or critical source chosen from provided titles.

REQUIRED TEXTS

Please note that these texts, in these specific editions, are required, not recommended.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>ENGL 581</th>
<th>PROBLEMS TEACHING ENGLISH (3 CR)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>581 – 301</td>
<td>INSTRUCTOR: A. Joseph</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

COURSE DESCRIPTION
TOPIC: Creative Writing

This class is intended for poets and fiction writers who wish to gain skills in the teaching of creative writing. Though the focus of the course will be on the teaching of creative writing in a university setting, we will also consider teaching populations that exist outside of university settings--such as children and adolescents.
SIUC’s annual Young Writers Workshop, a residential writing workshop for high school-aged writers, will be incorporated into this summer session course.

REQUIRED TEXTS
Power and Identity in the Creative Writing Classroom: The Authority Project (New Writing Viewpoints) [Paperback], Anna Leahy (ed), Publisher: Multilingual Matters (11/16/2005), ISBN-13: 978-1853598463