TEACHING

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY

UNIV 101: Saluki Success	Fall 2022
Freshman skills course surrounding academic expectations and the transition to college.
LING 558: Advanced Syntax	Falls 2015, 2019, 2020, 2021, 2022
Advanced graduate course in syntactic theory and syntactic analysis with special emphasis on Minimalist approaches to language.
INTL 301: Working International	Summer 2022
General education course focused on intercultural communication in the workplace.
LING 302: From Esperanto to Dothraki: The Linguistic Reality of Invented Languages	Springs 2017 & 2019; Summer 2022
Elective course in Linguistics without any prerequisite requirements. Focus is on linguistic typology through the lens of language invention.
LING 408/508: Introduction to Syntactic Theories / Syntactic Theories	Springs 2018, 2020, 2022
Introduction to Chomskyan syntax primarily covering the Principles and Parameters model, but also introducing students to more contemporary Minimalist principles and familiarizing them with the terms and technology to read original work from the Standard Theory and Extended Standard Theory Eras.
UHON 351: The 1000 Year Journey	Spring 2022
Honors course focused on questions of space exploration and colonization with special attention to human questions.

- LING 400/500: Formal Semantics
 Summer 2015 & Falls 2018, 2021
 Introductory course to formal approaches to meaning.
- LING 505: Professional Study of Linguistics
 Falls 2017, 2018, 2020
 Introduction to linguistics and academic professionalism for graduate students.
- LING 440: Advanced Syntax
 Fall 2020
 Undergraduate advanced syntax course (co-meeting with LING 558) focused on the scientific, philosophical and biological foundations of the Minimalist Program
- LING 440/550D: Morphology
 Spring 2020
 Introduction to morphology for advanced undergraduate and MA-level students in linguistics focusing primarily on Distributed Morphology.
- UHON 351: Medieval Books and Secret Languages
 Spring 2019
 Honors course focused on the Voynich Manuscript and related topics including medieval life, medical practices, language, code-breaking, and many other topics.
co-taught with Jacob Haubenreich
- LING 200: Language, Society, and the Mind
 Falls 2014-2017
 General education course introducing the field of linguistics to majors and non-majors alike
 (general education course)
- LING 405/503: Introduction to Phonological Theories/ Phonological Theories
 Spring 2016
 Cross-listed course for advanced undergraduates and graduate students focusing on the analysis of phonological problems and the some of the major theories in phonology.
- LING 406/506: Introduction to Historical Linguistics / Historical Linguistics
 Springs 2015 & 2016
 Cross-listed course for advanced undergraduates and graduate students, primarily enrolled by graduate students, focusing on the methods of the diachronic study of language.

LING 440/540: Invented Languages and Fictional Worlds

Spring 2015

Cross-listed course enrolled by graduate students and all levels of undergraduate students, focusing on the connections between constructed languages and natural occurring human languages and on fictional representations of language and linguistics.

KUTZTOWN UNIVERSITY

ENG 022: Introduction to College Composition

Fall 2013

Introduction to college-level writing and research methods for students who have self-identified as requiring additional instruction in these areas.

ENG 023: College Composition I

2013-2014

Introduction to college-level writing focusing on critical thinking, the writing process, research methods, and the interactions of each.

ENG 334: Introduction to English Linguistics

2013-2014

Introduction to descriptive generative theories of grammar focusing on aspects of the English language. Topics include phonetics, phonology, morphology, syntax, and educational best practices.

UNIVERSITY OF OKLAHOMA

LING 1203: Language Across Cultures

Summer 2013

General education course introducing the scientific study of language primarily focusing on the interplay between language and culture.
Web-delivered.
(cross-listed with Anthropology; general education course)

LING 2303: General Linguistics

2012-2013

Introductory Linguistics course targeted at majors and minors.
(cross-listed with Anthropology)

LING 3053: Phonology

Fall 2012

Undergraduate course on phonological analysis, theory and argumentation.
(cross-listed with Anthropology)

LING 4053/5053: Morphology

Spring 2013

Advanced undergraduate/introductory graduate course on morphological analysis and argumentation assuming a background in phonology and syntax.

LING 4330: Psycholinguistics (Topics in Linguistics)

Fall 2012

An introduction to psycholinguistics to students with minimal linguistics background.

LING 4330: Syntax II (Topics in Linguistics)

Spring 2013

An 2nd semester undergraduate syntax course focusing on advanced topics and an introduction to minimalism.

UNIVERSITY OF ARIZONA

INDV101: Mind, Self and Language

2006-7 & 2009

Introductory linguistics course targeted at a non-major, freshman-level audience. (general education course)

LING 211: Meaning in Language and Society

2009-2011

Introduction to semantics, pragmatics and topics in philosophy of language targeted at a general undergraduate audience. (cross-listed with Philosophy; general education course) Web-delivered.

LING300: Introduction to Syntax

2011-2012

Undergraduate course on syntactic analysis, theory and argumentation.

LING320: Language and Social Issues

2007 & 2011

Topics course on issues in sociolinguistics primarily targeted at linguistics majors. Web-delivered and traditional delivery.

LING 322: Structure and Meaning of Words

Summer 2008

Undergraduate course on morphological analysis, the historical development of English and the mental organization of the lexicon. (cross-listed with English)
